THE City of Glasgow, like many other important places, has no authentic record concerning the date of its origin, or the etymology of its name. There is, however, sufficient reason for believing that the Scottish western metropolis was a place of considerable importance during the time that the Romans retained their acquisitions in Scotland; the name Glasgow is admitted to be Gaelic, but the interpretations of its meaning are both varied and discordant. Little doubt of its existence as a Scottish town is traceable to the foundation of that religious society out of which the venerable cathedral took its rise. Its present magnitude, beauty, extensive manufactures, and commerce sufficiently indicate the early vitality and energy of its inhabitants. In point of commercial greatness and population, Glasgow may be reckoned the second city in the empire; it is in the county of Lanark, situated on the banks of the Clyde; 397 miles from London, 44 from Edinburgh, 137 from Aberdeen, 34 from Ayr, 29 from Stirling, 213 from Manchester, the same distance from Liverpool, 95 from Carlisle, 196 from Dublin, and 127 from Belfast. This distinguished city, in addition to its other claims on our regard, is entitled to respect for its venerable age; more than 1,300 years it has already numbered, and, unlike the myriads of sons and daughters to whom it has given birth, its beauty and vigour have augmented with its age. St. Kentigern, or Mungo, was the reputed parent, who founded a bishopric upon the site of the future city in the year 560; the tomb of this saint is still shown in the cathedral. John Achains, who had been invested with the crozier about the year 1124, erected the present cathedral, which was consecrated in 1133. Some years after this, William the Lion elevated the rising town to the rank of a royal burgh, with the privilege of an eight days' fair and a weekly market. In 1268 the mace was borne before a provost and bailies, and a seal was allowed them distinct from that of the bishop and chapter. In 1345 Stockwell Street Bridge was built, at the joint expense of Bishop Rae and Lady Lochow. Prior to this period the principal street was Drygate; some small tenements near the head of this street once formed part of the town mansion of the noble family of Montrose; Rotten row was then also one of the chief streets. In 1450 the city and barony of Glasgow were raised by James II., at the supplication of Bishop Turnbull, into a regality; in consequence of this proceeding, the bishops therefore obtained the nomination of the civil authorities. Bishop Turnbull next year induced Pope Nicholas V. to issue a bull for the erection of a university; Rotten row was the original site, but eight years afterwards Lord Hamilton bequeathed a tenement and four acres of land on the north side of Blackfriars church, where the college was situated until 1870; since then the Glasgow University has been removed to Gilmorehill. In 1484 the Tron church was built; this edifice was destroyed by fire in 1793. It was soon after re-built. The endowment of the University contributed essentially to the enlargement of the town; yet, several years subsequently, the inhabitants did not exceed 1,500 in number; the majority resided in the neighbourhood of the Cathedral, and about the precincts of the Bishop's palace; but as the population increased, the habitations gradually extended towards the cross. On the formation of the Society of Fishers, the Saltmarket soon gave convenient access to the Clyde; this humble community built Bridgegate (then called Fishergate), and appears to have been the first commercial company established in the city—fish, chiefly salmon, then being the staple of its trade. In 1527 the streets of Glasgow were stained with the blood of two martyrs to the principles of the Reformation—Jeremiah Russell and John Kennedy, the latter a youth of eighteen years of age; their deaths rather accelerated than retarded the progress of the opinions they had avowed. Forty-five years after that event, the High Church was opened as a Presbyterian place of worship; but in 1662 episcopacy being restored and enforced by the bayonet, the persecutions of the Presbyterians became as fierce as when impelled by the intolerance of popery; and an inscription on a fine monument beyond the infirmary records the names of three of its victims—James Nisbet, James Lawson, and Alexander Wood, who, in 1684, "were martyred for their adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's covenanted reformation." It may be remarked that this monument has been renewed three times. The present one was erected and unveiled with great ceremony about twenty years ago. The sanguinary efforts to establish prelacy continued, with more or less violence, until the happy revolution gave permanence to the presbytery. In 1638 was made the first purchase of land for the formation of a public green; but it was not until 1773 that the entire plot (described elsewhere) became the property of the city. During the rebellion of 1715, the citizens of Glasgow displayed great zeal in the cause of the then reigning family; they despatched six hundred men, at their own expense, to join the royal army; and a ditch round the town, twelve feet broad and six feet deep, was commenced, but the speedy overthrow of the Stuart faction dispensed with the necessity of its completion. In 1763, James Watt, who was educated in Glasgow, withdrew to a private room near the Broomielaw, and during his seclusion, with a single assistant, commenced those experiments that issued in such momentous results. Forty nine years afterwards, the unpatronised Henry Bell, of Helensburgh, launched his little "Comet" on the Clyde—the first steamboat which plied on any water, and proved its independence of wind and tide. The 14th of March, 1782, was memorable for the extraordinary height of the tide; the Clyde rose upwards of 20 feet above its usual mark, and completely insulated the village of Gorbals. In 1787, a strike occurred amongst the weavers against a reduction of wages. The men cut the webs from their looms and burned them in the streets. So serious did the riot grow, that the military were called out and the people were fired upon, several persons being killed and wounded. It affords an instructive glimpse relative to the distribution of the population in those days to read that the now deserted Drygate was the scene of the disturbance. Those killed were buried in what was then the suburb of Calton, six thousand people attended the funeral. In the wars which were waged against the revolutionary leaders of France, and their successor Napoleon I., from 1791 to 1815, Glasgow displayed her loyalty in a conspicuous manner. Her citizens mustered as volunteers in great force, with the view of repelling the anticipated invasion. Sir John Moore, who fell at Corunna, was a native of the city. In 1819-20 the distress and discontent which pervaded the country were largely felt in the district. A body of half-famished weavers, to whom political objects were ascribed, having assembled in force at Bonnymuir, near Kilsyth, were dispersed by the yeomanry. The incident is memorable as having occasioned the last executions that have taken place in Scotland for a political offence. James Wilson, a weaver from Strathaven, was convicted (on insufficient evidence it is now believed) of having taken a leading part in the movement. He was first hanged and then beheaded. Hardie and Baird were similarly dealt with at Stirling; their monument is in the Sighthill Necropolis, Glasgow. The passing of the Municipal Reform Act gave here, as elsewhere, a great impulse to the general interest in public matters, and the benefits derived from it were vastly enhanced about forty years ago by obtaining parliamentary sanction to an act extending the municipal boundaries. Formerly, Glasgow proper stood surrounded by the adjacent burghs of Calton, Gorbals, &c.—much as the city of London does—a mere speck in the centre of what was to all intents and purposes, except in the matters of government and administration, one city. Now the whole are embraced.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF GLASGOW AND ITS INSTITUTIONS.

The river Clyde divides the city into two unequal parts, that portion occupying the northern bank being the chief; this comprehends the old and new towns, with the districts of Calton, Bridgeton, Anderston, Brownfield, and Finnieston; the division on the opposite side of the river consists of the Barony of Gorbals, including Hutchesontown, Laurieston, Tradeston and Kingston. The communication between these two divisions of the city is by five bridges, two of which are of stone, one of iron, while two are suspension bridges; that at the end of Jamaica street, called Glasgow Bridge, is conspicuously elegant, and consists of seven arches, the curvature being so very trifling that the transit by it is attended with no inconvenience. The noble quays extend from this bridge in a westerly direction, affording altogether 19,242 lineal feet of quay wall; and it is here that the vessels by which this part of the river is crowded discharge and take in their cargoes. Included in the extent of quay wall just mentioned, is Kingston Dock, the area of which is 5½ acres. What was known as the Stobcross Dock, but which now has received the name of the Queen's Dock, the works for which were projected in 1872, and are the most extensive in Scotland, was opened on the 19th September, 1877. The dock covers an area of 83 acres. Its length is 3,000 feet, breadth 700, and average depth 20. The entire cost of the work was about £1,600,000. This section is the most important, including as it does the entrance and swing bridge. The basin is connected by means of a branch from Maryhill with the whole railway system of the kingdom. Commodious sheds range along the greater part of the line; and, owing to the admirable regulations established, and the commanding width of the line, notwithstanding the prodigious amount of business transacted, the operations of the port are accomplished without confusion or noise, and with surprising celerity. The new Graving Dock at Govan, the largest in Scotland, was opened in December, 1875, and is 560 feet long, and 72 feet wide at its entrance; the depth of water on sill being 12 feet 6 inches at high water. On the 9th of April, 1851, the foundation stone of the Victoria Bridge was laid by the Duke of Atholl, and a gorgeous municipal and masonic procession gave eclat to this memorable event. An iron bridge has been substituted for the Hutchesontown Bridge, which spanned the Clyde at the foot of the Saltmarket. The new structure has, in order to do honour to the memory of the late Prince Consort, been named the Albert Bridge. The foundation stone was laid with great ceremony on the 3rd June, 1870, by the late Earl of Dalhousie, the then Grand Master Mason of Scotland. But two years prior to that period the operation of placing the granite pillars upon which the bridge rested was carried on, so that the most formidable part of the undertaking had been got over when the foundation stone was laid. The bridge was opened without any ceremony on the 21st June, 1871. It is nearly level with the roadway, and spans the river in three arches, and in structural and ornamental design is extremely elegant. The outside painting is in green and gold, and medallions are shown upon the bridge of the Queen and the late Prince Consort. The cost of this superb structure and its adjuncts approach only £65,000. The engineers were Messrs. Bell and Miller, Glasgow. The suspension bridge, between Glasgow Bridge and the Victoria Bridge, for foot passengers, gracefully diversifies the pontine communications between the north and south sections of the city; it is one of the finest bridges in Europe, with a span of 420 feet: the chains rest on handsome piers, with columns of the Grecian-Ionic character in cast iron. The Union Railway bridge crosses about 165 yards east of the Victoria Bridge. It was opened in 1870, has a very plain appearance, and consists of five river spans of 75 feet clear each, and two street spans of 65 feet each, each pier consisting of two cast iron cylinders, sunk to a depth of 90 feet below high water level, the top of the piers being 30 feet above high water, the cost being £38,000. The Victoria Bridge, at the foot of Stockwell street, stands on the site of the "auld brig o' Glasgow," built about 1345. The present bridge, which was opened for traffic in 1856, has five arches of from 67 to 80 feet in span, is built of white granite, and is 445 feet long and 60 feet wide. The Caledonian Railway bridge has five spans of 110, 166, 200, 178 and 66 feet respectively, starting from the north side. The piers are sunk to a great depth, and are formed of concrete cased in iron, with granite above the low water level. It is 115 feet west from Glasgow Bridge, and there is a clear waterway at high tide of 32 feet. The height of the girders across the piers on the river is 21 feet, and across the streets 11 feet. The cost was about £80,000. The river between the opposite quays has not only been widened, but is progressively being deepened through the instrumentality of dredging machines, so that ships of upwards of 1,000 tons burthen now discharge at the Broomielaw. The mud raised by the machines is conveyed down the Clyde in flats, and spread where the shore is low and swampy, by which process the banks of the river are raised, and a rich soil is deposited. A diving bell is also employed as an assistant in dredging operations.

The main line of street, running east and west, is nearly two miles in length and eighty feet wide, assuming at different points the names of Gallowgate, Trongate, and Argyle street. Noble houses and handsome shops, with few exceptions, range on both sides throughout the entire line. The street which runs from north to south is about a mile in length and fifty feet broad, bearing successively the names of Castle street, Kirk street, High street and the far-famed Saltmarket, anciently the abiding place of Bailie Nicol Jarvie, and "mony mair bailies." The point of intersection of these two lines is called The Cross, and was at one time, before the population had progressed westward, the nucleus of the city. Here stands the Town Hall, in which the Corporation for many years held their meetings. It is no longer used for that purpose, the Town Council assembling in an elegant hall forming part of the County buildings, which, extending from Wilson street to Ingram street, cover a large space of ground. Opposite the old Town Hall is an equestrian statue of William III., presented to the city in 1736 by James M'Cra, Esq., then governor of Madras, and a native of Glasgow. Parallel with Argyle street, towards the north, are three other splendid streets, named Ingram street, St. Vincent street, and George street, crossed by others of uniform elegance; but Buchanan street, passing in a northern direction from Argyle street, opposite St. Enoch square, is the handsomest business street in the city. Parallel with this is Queen street. Sauchiehall street, which runs from Buchanan street westward nearly a mile, ranks amongst the finest streets in the city. The shops on its southern side are very handsome and attractively stored. The architectural taste displayed in the western section of the city is of the first order, and to it the two fine squares, George and Blythswood, along with the handsome streets and crescents that have lately sprung up beyond them, add a graceful magnificence. Park gardens, Quadrant, and Circus, the Claremont gardens, and Woodside terrace, all challenge admiration, by their spacious and handsome appearance. The houses are all of stone, and the construction and arrangement of the streets imparts to this vicinity a resemblance to a portion of Bath. In George square are magnificent equestrian statues of the Queen and the late Prince Consort, which occupy corresponding positions inside the quadrangle. A tall pillar, surmounted by a statue of Sir Walter Scott, rises between them, while figures of Sir John Moore, Lord Clyde, Sir Robert Peel, the late Thomas Graham (Master of the Mint, and a native of Glasgow), and James Watt, also adorn the square. The last affords an exquisitely graceful and happy example of the sculptor's art. Burns' monument, erected by public subscription of not more than one shilling from each person, and which amounted in three months to £2,000, was inaugurated, amid a grand public demonstration, on the anniversary of Burns' birthday. The pedestal consists of grey granite, and has bronze bas reliefs on its panels contributed by towns in the west of Scotland, and forming illustrations of Burns' works; the statue is nine feet high, and represents Burns in the garb of a small farmer of his time, grasping a Kilmarnock bonnet, standing against the stump of a tree, and musing over a daisy. Two other monuments have a position in George square—Dr. Livingstone and the poet Campbell—and were erected in 1877, each comprising a standing bronze statue by John Mossman, and a granite pedestal. Dr. Livingstone's statue represents him in simple rough travelling costume, standing by the stump of a palm tree, holding a bible, and seemingly in the act of speaking; and Campbell's represents him in the costume of the latter part of George IV.'s reign, holding a scroll and appearing to be about to write. The old town lies to the east of the Trongate, extending to the Clyde on the south, and to the Cathedral on the north. The Argyle arcade runs from Argyle street to Buchanan street, and contains attractive shops, covered in by a lofty roof of glass. There is a second arcade in Sauchiehall street, called the Wellington, and one from Renfrew street in connection with it, called the Victoria; the Bazaar (the Covent Garden of Glasgow) is situated in Candlerigg street.

Conspicuous among the throng of elegant buildings which adorn the city are the banking establishments, many of which are architecturally beautiful, and all are proud testimonials to the commercial enterprise of this port, of which they are representatives. Among them we may mention the Bank of Scotland, erected in 1867, in the ornamental Italian style, and having over its St Vincent place entrance a ponderous entablature resting on noble caitle caryatides, from the chisel of William Mossman. The Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, in Ingram street, having undergone extensive alterations, now presents a fine appearance, being ornamentally one of the richest in the city. The building is in the Italian style, with a frontage of 106 feet to the above-named street. To a height of six feet from the pavement the outer surface of the masonry is of polished Aberdeen granite, varying from twelve to sixteen inches in thickness. Surmounting the main entrance is a massive open pediment embellished with carved work, in the centre of which is raised a sculptural group, representing the figures, shield, and coat of arms engraved on the notes issued by this bank. The building, of which Mr. Burnet, of Glasgow was the architect, is estimated to have cost over £30,000. The Clydesdale Bank, Limited, on the north side of St. Vincent place, was erected in 1873, after designs by Mr. John Burnet. It rises to a height of three storeys, has a frontage of 134 feet, and flankage of 109 feet. It is rusticated in the front of the first storey, Ionic in that of the second, and Corinthian in that of the third. On the south side of St. Vincent place are situated the offices of the Scottish Amicable Assurance Company, erected in 1872-3, after designs by Messrs. Campbell, Douglas & Sellars. The building is in the highly ornate Italian style, and exhibits symbolic features of Faith Justice, and Amity, from the chisel of Mr. William Mossman. Some of the warehouses and offices of recent erection are also large and imposing buildings; notably so are the immense wholesale warehouses of Messrs. J. & W. Campbell & Co., and a superb range of offices known as Victoria buildings, in West Regent street; either of these piles, if advantageously situated, would have a commanding effect. The Royal Exchange in Queen street is also a very handsome structure. The principal entrance is by a grand portico of twelve fluted Corinthian pillars, thirty feet high. After passing through a tasteful vestibule, the visitor enters the great reading room, which is 130 feet long and 62 feet wide; the lofty roof is supported by a double row of columns 19 feet high, each composed of a single stone. A dome, supported by twelve Corinthian pillars, surmounts the building. The great room is supplied with all the leading newspapers, and strangers are courteously allowed the privileges of the room upon subscribing their names. In front stands the equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, unsurpassed for grace of style and truthfulness of expression. It was erected in 1844, at a cost of £10,000. The numerous apartments above and below the Exchange are appropriated to various commercial purposes. The new Stock Exchange, in Buchanan street, which was opened in 1877, is in the early French-Gothic style of architecture, three storeys in height, and has a highly ornamental and striking appearance. The buildings, of which Mr. Burnet was the architect, cost upwards of £50,000. The Municipal buildings, in Wilson street, form a splendid group of Grecian architecture; in front is an Ionic portico, chastely proportioned; the façade is handsome, stately and imposing. Internally, it contains a council hall (in which the municipal body hold their meetings), splendidly decorated; there are also the fiscal's chamber, and other public offices, all elegantly fitted up and beautiful. The Merchants' House—one of the wealthiest corporations in Glasgow—erected in 1874-7, is in the massive highly ornamental style, having at its north-east corner a tower 122 feet high, and presents a frontage of 98 feet to George square and 96 feet to George street. The Chamber of Commerce occupies a portion of the building. The Trades' Hall, in Glassford street, is a very handsome building; the front consists of a centre and wings, supported by a rustic basement, four Doric columns above support the entablature, and a dome, surmounted by a lantern, rises from the roof. The hall, one of the finest rooms in the city, is 70 feet long, 35 broad, and 24 high, exclusive of the dome. On the walls and staircase are hung portraits of persons of the trades' rank that have conferred donations on the House, and also tablets recording the names of the conveners from 1605 to the present time. The City Hall, in Candlerigg street, is a very spacious building, in which public meetings are commonly held. The new Public Halls, in Granville street, are a most imposing block of buildings, in the Grecian style, having a frontage to Granville street of 200 feet, and are composed of two wings and a centre—the former being flanked with great piers, between which are four Ionic pillars, 32ft. high, the centre part having eight similar pillars. The street floor is of a simple and severe style; the upper storeys contain large figures, about 10 feet high, representing Music, Painting, Science, Architecture, Poetry, &c., the names of many ancient composers, painters, &c., occupying prominent positions. The reception room is 75 feet by 40 feet, and is 32 feet high. The large hall is 185 feet long (including the back gallery) 75 feet wide and 58 feet high. The hall can accommodate 2,500 persons at a full dress concert, and 3,800 at a popular meeting. The ball room measures 80 feet by 60 feet, and the supper room 60 feet by 18½ feet. The large organ is one of the finest in the country. In Hope street stands the Corn Exchange, a spacious and handsome structure, with a portico, sustained by Corinthian fluted columns; the interior is fitted up in complete adaptation to the peculiar transactions of this important market, held every Wednesday. There are several corn mills in and around Glasgow upon a scale of great magnitude.

At the back of the Cathedral is a rocky eminence called the Merchants' Park, upon the summit of which, on a fluted Doric column, 58 feet high, is placed a colossal statue of the illustrious Scottish reformer, John Knox; appropriate inscriptions are sculptured on the four sides of the pedestal. This proud monument, so attractive from its position and magnitude, was raised in the year 1825. Contiguous to this is another, similar in character but of inferior dimensions, erected more recently, to the memory of M'Gavin, the formidable opponent of Popery, and author of "The Protestant." The statue of Knox is 250 feet above the level of the Clyde, and is a conspicuous object at a great distance; the artist was Mr. Forrest, of Lanark, and the likeness was taken from an original painting in the Glasgow University. The surrounding grounds have been tastefully planted and formed into a cemetery, named the Necropolis, and the stranger will be highly gratified by a visit to this interesting spot. The view from the summit of the hill is pleasing and commanding, access to it being obtained by a handsome bridge.

A monument of Lord Nelson, on Glasgow Green, is a simple obelisk, 143 feet in height, surrounded by a protecting railing; the four sides of the pedestal record the birth, achievements, and death of this naval hero; and the fact of this being the first memorial sculptured to his memory, impresses a high idea of the public spirit of the citizens. The Green, of which it is so conspicuous an ornament, is Glasgow's pride. This delightful promenade covers an extent of 140 acres. The Clyde washes its southern margin; the prospect towards the south-east is beautiful and extensive woods and villas in the foreground, and the hill of Dychmont, with the loftier and more distant one of Tinto, in the distance. Here, during the summer months, may be witnessed the games of cricket and football, and then, too, the Green is animated by military evolutions. Besides the Green, three other large and beautifully laid out parks have been acquired through the wise liberality of the Corporation. The Kelvingrove or West End Park comprises 50 acres of ground on both sides of the Kelvin. Sir Joseph Paxton furnished the design for its ornamentation. It formed a portion of the old estates of Woodside and Kelvingrove. The old Manor is still preserved but has recently undergone many alterations, improvements and additions, to fit it for serving as the Museum which contains many interesting objects in nature, art and science, and well repays a careful inspection. One speciality is the Fulton Orrery, a wonderful piece of mechanism, representing the movements of the heavenly bodies. Outside the museum is an old engine said to be one of the first made by James Watt, the great inventor of the steam engine. The chaste and beautifully modelled fountain in the park was erected in 1872 to commemorate the introduction of Loch Katrine water into Glasgow, and the services in connection therewith of the late Lord Provost, Robert Stewart, Esq., of Mirdostoun. The fountain is 40 feet high and is surmounted by a fine bronze figure representative of the Lady of the Lake. Close by is a group of bronze statuary, presented to his native city by John S. Kennedy, Esq., of New York. It is modelled from sketches taken in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The Queen's Park, situated to the south of the city, has a total extent of 117 acres, and was also laid out by Sir Joseph Paxton. From the flagstaff mound a beautiful prospect stretches out all around except on one side where the clump of trees interpose, and which mark the spot where camped the Regent Moray at the memorable battle of Langside, 13th May, 1568. The pleasure ground to the east of the park was the scene of the battle, and close to is Queen Mary's Cottage on the main road. A stone in the wall tells the tale. The Alexandra, or North Eastern Park, lies in the north-eastern vicinity of Dennistoun. It was formed in 1870-73, is 85 acres in extent, and was acquired and laid out at a cost of £40,000. Glasgow can now boast of having a park in each of the four quarters of the city.

No stranger can perambulate Glasgow without noticing its admirable pavement. The material being granite, of almost indestructible hardness, Glasgow may be deemed one of the best paved cities in Europe. The whole extent of the thoroughfares within the city, apart from mere lanes, alleys, &c. is about 120 miles. A sum of £35,000 is expended annually upon paving these streets and keeping them in repair. The city is plentifully supplied with good and cheap gas by the Corporation, which has the most extensive works to be found anywhere. The same body also supplies to the city and adjoining burghs water of remarkable excellence. It is derived from Loch Katrine, a Highland lake, thirty-four miles distant. The great work by which this is accomplished was begun in 1856, under the superintendence of Mr. Bateman, C.E. and completed three years afterwards. It was a formidable undertaking, the engineering difficulties being very considerable. The aqueduct from the lake to a service reservoir, constructed eight miles out of town, is twenty-six miles long. For the half of that distance the water is conveyed through tunnels. Four miles consist of iron piping carried across valleys, while for the rest there are open cuttings and bridges. The cost of the aqueduct averaged £18,000 per mile. The total cost of the work rather exceeded one million and a half; but this immense outlay has been well bestowed. It has placed Glasgow, in relation to her water supply, alike as regards quantity, quality, and price, far ahead of all the large towns in the kingdom. The present supply is about 33,500,000 gallons daily, whilst provision has been made for a supply up to 50,000,000 gallons daily, an amount more than double that which could be obtained thirty years ago, and one that might be doubled again if necessity arise. Its purity has been attested, by frequent chemical analyses, to be very remarkable. But no adequate idea would be obtained of the enterprise of the municipality of Glasgow if notice were not taken of the City Improvement Trust. This Trust was created in 1866, having for its object the purchase of buildings (especially old buildings), taking them down, opening up new streets in densely and ill-built localities, and in great part reconstructing the older portions of the city. A tax was imposed to enable the trustees to carry out their operations. They have acquired property to the extent of nearly £2,000,000. The work of re-construction having long been going on, is nearly now complete, making Glasgow one of the finest cities in the Empire. The public slaughter-houses are in Scott street, Milton street, and Moore street, Gallowgate. The last named is very much the largest in Scotland—perhaps in the kingdom. It is situated adjoining the cattle market; it may be said that the two are one and the same.

COMMERCE, TRADE, AND MANUFACTURES.

Fishing was the earliest branch of productive industry established in Glasgow. Cured salmon was exported in large quantities to France, and different French productions were taken in exchange. In 1667 a whale fishing company was formed, and a soap manufactory was established. The commercial prosperity of this city may be dated from its embarkation in the Virginian tobacco trade.

The commerce of Glasgow was at first carried on in vessels chartered from English ports; although it is on record that this city was in possession of shipping prior to the year 1516, and in the reign of Charles II., the 'Leon" privateer was equipped here for a cruise against the Dutch. It was not until the year 1718, however, that a ship built on the Clyde, the property of Glasgow citizens, crossed the Atlantic. At that time a good supply of tobacco was brought to this market, and the merchants were enabled to dispose of that article upon more advantageous terms than those of London and other commercial towns in England, which produced great animosity between those parties. The English tobacco merchants charged those of Glasgow with frauds on the revenue. An inquiry was eventually made before Parliament, when a number of restrictions were imposed on the trade, which caused it to decline in Glasgow till the year 1735; it then began to revive, and at length attained such a degree of prosperity that, for several years previous to the American revolutionary war, the annual imports of tobacco into the Clyde were from 35,000 to 45,000 hogsheads; in the year immediately preceding that disastrous war, 57,148 hogsheads were imported; from 1,200 to 1,300 hogsheads only of the annual imports were sold for home consumption; indeed this trade, at that period, engrossed nearly the whole available capital and commercial enterprise of Glasgow. The following figures as to the state of this trade for some years back will be read with interest. In 1857 duty was paid in the ports of the Clyde on 2,249,307lbs; in 1868, on 2,409,550lbs; in 1869, on 2,459,333lbs; in 1870, on 2,489,955lbs; in 1871, on 2,741,424lbs; in 1872, on 2,692,456lbs; in 1873, on 2,768,331lbs; in 1874, on 2,831,819lbs; in 1875, on 2,750,646lbs; in 1876, on 3,066,326lbs; in 1877, on 3,322,693lbs; in 1878, on 3,116,121lbs; in 1879, on 3,029,190lbs; and in 1880, on 3,000,000lbs.

The customs revenue collected in Glasgow also give an idea of its enterprise. In 1868 they amounted to £1,352,246; 1869, £1,185,753; 1870, £963,534; 1871, £999,572; 1873, £1,056,301; 1874, £972,792; 1875, £960,854; 1876, £1,022,825; 1879, £967,333; and for the year ending 31st March, 1881, £971,916. The rental of the city of Glasgow, including that portion of the ancient royalty outside the parliamentary burgh, as prepared by the assessor under the Lands Valuation Act, was in 1855-6, £1,362,168; in 1865-6, £1,808,430; in 1876-7, £3,096,847; in 1877-8, £3,295,888; in 1878-9, £3,395,652; in 1879-80, £3,406,008; and in 1880-1, it amounted to £3,490,517.

The merchants and manufacturers of Glasgow, compelled to turn their attention to other objects when their favourite intercourse with America was interrupted by the war in 1775, began more generally to speculate upon the establishment of manufactures. The introduction of the muslin trade was the result, and it was prosecuted by men of capital with the greatest spirit and success. Early in the present century, the high price paid for the embroidery of muslins enabled thousands of young women in Ayrshire to earn a comfortable living by what is still termed "Ayrshire needle work." Later, this industry was extended to the North of Ireland, and Belfast competitors became rivals for their employment. Still Glasgow remains the chief seat and mart of the manufacture. It was computed that in 1857 the sales of this production had a value of a million and a half. In that year one of the largest firms in the trade failed for a larger sum than had ever been involved in any trade bankruptcy in Glasgow. The trade thus received a check, from which it has not yet recovered. But its progress has been upwards, in the direction of renewed prosperity.

From the introduction of power-loom weaving in 1773, or more correctly, from the application of steam power to cotton spinning in 1792, the cotton trade and manufactures in Glasgow largely helped to increase its wealth, and advanced it to greatness. Almost all varieties of textile manufactures are here carried on, more or less.

The iron trade has long been one of the staple trades of Glasgow. The city has in relation to it very great advantages from its close proximity to the iron fields. In its immediate vicinity there were last year (1881) 105 iron furnaces in blast. The Glasgow Exchange is the scene of sale for this vast manufacture, and the Clyde ports are principally those of shipment. We give the amount of production and shipment for the 21 years ending in 1881:—

The importations of tea during the last 14 years were as follow:—1867, 6,149,902lbs; 1868, 5,836,524lbs; 1869, 6,318,754lbs; 1870, 6,626,442lbs; 1871, 6,937,526lbs; 1872, 6,765,550lbs; 1873, 7,041,991lbs; 1874, 6,971,287lbs; 1875, 7,206,503lbs; 1876, 6,957,559lbs; 1877, 6,685,577lbs; 1878, 6,025,024lbs; 1879, 5,618,898lbs; and in 1880, 5,493,056.

In ship building, Glasgow deservedly holds a high position. Its building yards are both numerous and extensive, and the vessels constructed here, whether of timber, iron, or steel, have attained a wide-spread celebrity. Specimens of them navigate every sea.

There were launched during the year 1879 by the various firms on the Clyde, 170 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 173,438 tons, as compared with 236 vessels and 222,353 tons during the year 1878. The exact bearing and relation of the returns will, however, be best seen by reference to the following table, which gives the amount of tonnage launched during each of the last twenty-three years:—

The figures for 1881 show an increase of 92,753 tons over the output in 1880, and of 163,868, or nearly double that of 1877, the lowest of the past seven years. As contrasted with 1874, there is an increase of 45,000 tons this year. The estimated value of the ships and machinery may be said, in round figures, to be £8,000,000, against £6,000,000 last year, and £4,000,000 for 1879. In the latter year, however, wages and iron were cheaper, and rates for vessels considerably lower The total number of men employed in the 37 iron shipbuilding yards on the Clyde, and its tributaries to the Leven and Cart, and in the engineering works connected therewith, at the present time, is estimated at 50,000, one yard alone having close upon 5,000 employes. Nearly one-fourth, or fully 75,000 tons of the tonnage launched consisted of vessels of steel. Screw steam shipping has been the chief class of work undertaken, and the output aggregated 279,268 tons, an increase of fully 84,000 tons over last year, and within 52 600 tons of the total tonnage launched. There have been considerable variations in the demand for this class of ship during the past ten years. In 1868 and 1869, the screw steam tonnage almost equalled that of the sailing vessels. The opening of the Suez Canal caused an increased demand for steam vessels. In 1869, the sailing tonnage built was 89,000 tons, and of steam 85,090 tons. Next year the tables turned, and steam aggregated 138,000 tons, against 39,000 tons of sailing tonnage. The high price of fuel led to a diminution of this proportion in 1874, '5, '6, and '7; but during the past four years there has been a gradual increase in the number of steam vessels. Of the vessels launched during the year, the Servia, 7,392 tons, was the largest; the Alaska, 6,932, being the next in size. The Austral, of 5,600 tons; the Missouri, 5,146 tons; the Belgravia, 5,075 tons; the Rome, 5,013 tons; and the Carthage, 5,013 tons, come next, these seven vessels aggregating fully 40,000 tons, or about an eighth of the whole tonnage. There were 12 steamers varying from 4,000 to 4,911 tons each, 13 from 3,000 tons to 3,972 tons each, and 30 varying from 2,000 tons to 2,989 tons each.

The merchants import to a large amount sugars, rum, wines, brandy, timber, coffee, cotton, flour, &c. and numberless other productions of the western world, particularly from Demerara, the Caraccas, Buenos Ayres, the United States, Canada, Nova Scotia, &c. Their commercial transactions likewise extend to the coasts of Asia and Africa, and are of considerable consequence in many of the ports of Europe. Their exportations comprise muslins, shawls, and every description of cotton goods, silks, glass, soap, whiskey, and the various manufactures of the neighbouring town of Paisley, as well as the products of the adjacent districts.

Of course the Clyde is the great highway for mercantile traffic. The following statement of the number and tonnage of shipping arrivals (steam vessels and sailing vessels combined) will give an idea of the activity of the maritime operations of the port. In the year 1841 the numbers were:—Under 40 tons, 3,432; 40 to 60, 3,965; 60 to 80, 2,758; 80 to 100, 3,139; 100 to 150, 899; 150 to 200, 292; 200 to 250, 179; 250 to 300, 235; 300 to 350, 81; 350 to 400, 73; 400 to 450, 63; 450 to 500, 18; 500 to 600, 69; 600 to 700, 3. In 1876 the corresponding numbers were:—Under 40 tons, 3,579; 40 to 60, 2,822; 60 to 80, 2,110; 80 to 100, 1,436; 100 to 150, 852; 150 to 200, 392; 200 to 250, 515; 250 to 300, 492; 300 to 350, 330; 350 to 400, 491; 400 to 450, 428; 450 to 500, 416; 500 to 600, 239; 600 to 700, 67; 700 to 1,000, 140; 1,000 and upwards, 267. In 1879 the corresponding numbers were:—Under 40 tons, 4,461; 40 to 60, 3,036; 60 to 80, 2,203; 80 to 100, 1,388; 100 to 150, 885; 150 to 200, 389; 200 to 250, 737; 250 to 300, 474; 300 to 350, 335; 350 to 400, 501; 400 to 450, 448; 450 to 500, 423; 500 to 600, 299; 600 to 700, 81; 700 to 1,000, 158; 1,000 and upwards, 358. The tonnage of vessels owned in Glasgow on the 31st December, 1878, was 700,077 tons; number of vessels owned 1,130 consisting of sailing vessels 564, tonnage, 375,557; steam vessels 566, tonnage, 342,441, and in 1880 the tonnage was 776,780 number of vessels owned, 1,207; composed of sailing ships, 570; tonnage, 367,216; steam ships, 637; tonnage, 409 564.

Grangemouth is the port of the eastern entrance of the Forth and Clyde canal through which sea-going vessels of considerable burthen can pass to Glasgow or to the Firth of Clyde, and places beyond. The length of the canal to Glasgow is 29 miles, and its entire length 35 miles. The locks are 20 feet wide and 74 feet long, admitting vessels about 68½ feet in length, and little under 20 feet in breadth. The depth of water is fully 9 feet. The toll for passing on the canal is one penny per ton per mile for all articles except gunpowder For the accommodation of vessels too large to enter the canal, capacious wet docks and other works have been provided, and there is now room for about twenty thousand tons of shipping The depth of water in the river Carron, between the port and the Frith of Forth, is about 20 feet at spring and fifteen feet at neap tides.

The railways converging on Glasgow are the Caledonian, the North British, the Glasgow and South Western, the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint line, and the Glasgow and Paisley joint line. The City of Glasgow Union Railway connects the North British and Glasgow and South Western Railway. The chief passenger stations in Glasgow are the Caledonian Central station, Gordon street, head of Buchanan street, Bridge street, Eglinton street, Bridgeton and London road. The North British, Queen street and College square, Glasgow and South Western, St. Enoch square, and Bridge street; Glasgow, Paisley and Kilmarnock, St. Enoch square; Glasgow and Paisley, Bridge street; and City Union, St. Enoch square, Main street, Gallowgate and Bellgrove. It may likewise be mentioned here that regular and frequent communication by steam packet is maintained with Liverpool, Cork, Limerick, Galway, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, and the Western Highlands.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT, &c.

The "Lord Provost" is the designation of the chief magistrate of Glasgow, who is styled honourable; the subordinate functionaries are ten bailies, the dean of guild, and the deacon convenor. There are 48 councillors—three for each of the 16 wards into which the city is divided, and the dean of guild and deacon convenor, who are councillors by virtue of their offices. The principal officers connected with the corporation are the treasurer, chamberlain, town clerks, master of works, bailie of the river and Frith and Clyde and his deputy, bailie of Provan, procurator fiscal, and superintendent of streets and buildings. There are also two other bodies that exercise municipal privileges—the Merchants' House and the Trades' House. The dean of guild belongs to and is nominated by the former, and the convenor to the latter House, by which he is appointed. As illustrative of the onerous and varied duties that devolve upon the municipal authorities, it may be stated that the Corporation administers, solely or in part, 20 distinct trusts, that the united annual revenue of these is in excess of £400,000, and that the debts affecting these amount to more than three millions. Besides, they have either complete or partial control of the financial affairs connected with the numerous charitable foundations, schools, &c.

The police are under the direction of the honourable the lord provost, the magistrates, dean of guild, deacon convenor, and eighteen commissioners chosen by the town council from among its own members. There are five police districts—a central district, and one for each quarter of the city. There are several courts held within the jurisdiction of the city, the chief of which are the following:—The Dean of Guild Court, held every alternate Thursday, at eleven o'clock, takes cognizance of buildings and streets. The Sheriff Small Debt Court, for debts not exceeding £12, sits every Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The Justice of Peace Small Debt Court, for the Lower Ward of Lanarkshire, meets every Monday morning at ten, in the County Hall, to decide claims of £8 and under. The County Court sits every Wednesday for criminal offences, and Thursday for the recovery of small debts. The River Bailie Court sits every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and has marine jurisdiction between Glasgow Bridge and the Cloch, near the mouth of the Clyde. The Sheriff Ordinary Court sits every Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, and the Burgh Ordinary Court every Friday, except during the vacation; both adjudicate on causes of any amount, however large.

The principal gaol, called the Northern Prison, which unfortunately it has been recently found necessary to enlarge by the erection of a considerable compartment in the rear, is in Duke street. The South Prison is in the rear of a commanding range of buildings, with its frontage towards the river, near the Victoria Bridge; there is a noble portico in the centre, composed of a double row of fluted columns. The two justiciary halls are in the centre, arranged with the requisite conveniences for a court of justice.

Glasgow returns three members to Parliament; the gentlemen now sitting are Charles Cameron, Esq. LL.D. (L), George Anderson, Esq. (L), and R. T. Middleton, Esq. (L). The total parliamentary constituency in 1879-80 was over 69,313; municipal constituency 63,323; school board constituency for 1879-82, 119,743.

RELIGIOUS EDIFICES.

The Cathedral, or High Church, which ornaments the north-eastern termination of the city, and is one of very few ecclesiastical structures of ancient Scotland that has withstood the withering influence of time, the assaults of religious fury, and the sapping of neglect, arose in the early part of the twelfth century. John Achaius, Bishop of Glasgow, was its founder, and John Murdo its supposed architect, the reigning King being David I., who witnessed its consecration. A stone above the door of the choir tells us, in Latin, that it was dedicated in 1197, St. Mungo or Kentigern being invoked as its tutelar patron The figure of the edifice is cruciform. From the centre of the building rises a square embattled tower, of lofty octangular form, from which springs a spire The length of the choir from east to west is 320 feet, and the breadth is 63. The height of the nave is 85 feet, and of the choir 90. The spire is 325 feet in height, and the circumference of the whole building 1,100 feet. One hundred and forty-seven pillars support the pile, and its windows number one hundred and fifty-seven. They vary in size, and some of them are exquisite in design. The building has lately undergone a process of restoration and embellishment, which, bringing out all the beauty of the original plan, makes it in some respects one of the most richly decorated temples in Europe. The windows have been filled with stained glass according to a connected and harmonious plan. Those in the nave represent Old Testament subjects, according to the order of biblical chronology; those in the choir represent subjects from the teaching of the Saviour. The work was chiefly executed in Munich. The cost of the east window, the finest of the series, was defrayed by parliamentary grant, that of the others by donors, who presented or joined in presenting separate windows by way of family memorials

The Barony Church, contiguous to the Cathedral, was built in 1798, from a design by Mr. Adam: the parish connected with this church is the largest in the city. The College, or Blackfriars Church, in High street, is a plain building, erected in 1699, on the site of a more ancient pile, called Blackfriars, which in 1650 was destroyed by a thunderstorm. The Tron or Laigh Church, near the Cross, was erected in 1794, and is a plain building, surmounted by a cupola. A spire, built in 1637, stands between it and the street, having a clock and two bells. The name of the "Tron" was applied to this church from a part of its steeple having been used as a weigh house.

The clock faces of this church are lighted externally by gaslamps. Saint Andrew's Church, which stands in a square of the same name, was completed in 1756, at an expense of £15,000, and resembles that of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, London. The architect was Mungo Nasmyth. Saint Enoch's Church was erected in 1780, from designs by Mr. Jaffray. The front, on which is the spire, is decorated with a Doric portico, and has a light and handsome appearance; it stands in St. Enoch square, and is a graceful terminating object from Buchanan street. Saint George's Church, on the west side of Buchanan street, fronting George street, is a handsome edifice, with three-quarter Doric columns in front, the whole height of the church. The steeple is crowned with a dome and obelisk, and is one hundred and sixty-two feet high. This church was finished at an expense of £9,000. St. John's Church, in Greme street, is one of the largest places of worship in the city, affording sixteen hundred sittings; it was built during the residence here of Dr. Chalmers, whose pulpit oratory attracted large congregations. The Gorbals Church is situated at the east end of Carlton place, fronting the river; it was completed in 1819, from designs by Mr. D. Hamilton. The clock of this church, from its great elevation, is seen to a great distance. St. David's Church, at the end of Candleriggs street, is in the Gothic style, and was built from the designs of Messrs. Rickman and Hutchinson, of Birmingham. Circumstances have rendered it expedient to retain the shape and dimensions of the old church; it is built in the form of a cross, and is ornamented with a tower one hundred and twenty feet high. The vaulted cemetery beneath is one of the most complete in the kingdom. The cost of the church was £7,000, but the sepulchres in the crypt sold for £4,000. The patronage of the city churches belongs to the magistrates and town council, with the exception of the inner High Church and the Barony, which pertain to the Crown. The patronage of Gorbals Church is with heritors or feuars, who purchased it from the Collège. The stipends of the city clergy are £425 per annum, that of the inner High Church considerably more. The pew sittings are let annually. Apart from the city churches, the revenues of which are drawn by the Corporation who pay the salaries of the clergy, there are many churches in the city connected with the Establishment, which are self supporting. Many of the religious edifices are fine buildings, such as Park and Sandyford Established Churches; the St. John's, St. Matthew's, St. George's, the College, and Kelvinside Free Churches; St. Vincent street, Claremont and Lansdowne United Presbyterian Churches; and Bath street and Trinity Congregational Churches.

CEMETERIES.—Close to the Cathedral is the Necropolis, one of the finest cemeteries in Britain. The approach to it is by a lofty bridge, which spans the valley through which the Molindinar runs. This bridge has rather appropriately been called the "Bridge of Sighs." The grounds which are beautified with shrubberies, trees, flowers and gravel walks, are also thickly adorned with monumental columns and statues, tastefully executed and beautiful in design. Sighthill Cemetery, in the vicinage of St. Rollox, is of considerable extent, and is entered by a magnificent gateway, near to which is a handsome chapel. The southern Necropolis, Rutherglen, is also neat in its arrangement of walks and flowers, and it has also many monumental adornments. The Craighton Cemetery is situated on the Paisley road.

INSTITUTIONS FOR EDUCATION, LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE ARTS.

THE UNIVERSITY.—The new University buildings are situated at Gilmorehill, west end of Glasgow, and separated by the river Kelvin from Kelvingrove Park They were commenced in April, 1867, and on the 8th October of the following year the foundation stone was laid by the Prince of Wales. They are from plans prepared by Sir Gilbert Scott, one of the most celebrated Gothic artists of the day. The style is that of the early period of the fourteenth century, as applied to collegiate structures, and, apart from the professors' houses, occupy a space of nearly four acres on the summit of the hill. They form an oblong rectangular pile of about six hundred feet by three hundred feet. On the south side of the buildings a stately tower rises to the height of three hundred feet, and on the eastern side are the Medical and the Natural History Class-rooms, projecting from which is an octagonal building forming the Chemical and Anatomical Laboratories. In the northern section of the pile is the Library, founded prior to the Reformation, and containing upwards of one hundred thousand volumes, a Students' Reading Room, and the famous Hunterian Museum. This museum was bequeathed to the College by the celebrated Dr. Hunter, of London, who was a native of East Kilbride. The collection contains specimens of natural history, anatomical preparations, paintings, books, and medals, the medals being estimated at £30,000, and the whole collection cost Dr. Hunter, £100,000 The pictures are all from great masters; amongst many others are Titian, Guido, Domenichino, Rubens, and Rembrandt. The University was founded by Turnbull, Roman Catholic Bishop of Glasgow, in 1450-51. At the Reformation, Archbishop James Beaton fled before the triumphant Presbyterians, carrying with him the charters and records, which he placed in the Scots' College at Paris. James VI. granted a new charter, and endowed the college with valuable property, since which it has risen to high reputation.

The history of the University is full of interest. Its foundation was by a bull issued by Pope Nicholas V. on the 7th of January, 1450-1. It is, therefore, the second oldest among the universities of Scotland, St. Andrew's alone being before it. It was established under the name then given to such institutions—studium generale, and included all the usual faculties in addition to theology, canon and civil law, and the arts. At first the business of instruction was carried on in a building near the Cathedral, in a street now called the Rotten row. In 1460 the first Lord Hamilton made a gift to the Corporation of a site, comprising a portion of that which the old college buildings occupied. Thither the teaching and residence of the members of the University were transferred in 1465 Its business was carried on with varied success till the time of the Reformation, when the revenues were thrown into utter confusion. The public spirit of the citizens was the means of providing for its restoration; and in 1574 renewed animation was given to its academic teaching by the advent, as Principal, of the famous Andrew Melville. His nephew reports that "there was na place in Europe comparable to Glasgow for guid letters during these years, for a plentiful and chepe mercat of all kinds of languages, artes, and sciences." The chairs of Natural Philosophy, Moral Philosophy, and Logic were founded in 1577, and Greek in 1581. The prosperity thus acquired was confirmed by the concession in 1577 of a charter granted by the Regent Morton, and usually known as the Nova Erectio of James VI, then in minority. The instrument was the foundation of many of the statutes by which the University is still governed. During the Protectorate its welfare was enhanced by the attendance of many non-conforming students from England; but at the Restoration, in 1660, it was deprived of a great portion of its resources, and three of its professorships fell into abeyance. Its fortunes rose again with the Revolution. The chair of mathematics was founded in 1691, and during the next thirty years another half dozen chairs were either revived or established, namely, Humanity, revived, 1706, although founded in 1637; Oriental Languages, 1709; Civil Law and Medicine, 1713; Church History, 1720; and Anatomy, 1718. A professorship of Astronomy was established in 1760; while during the present century several new chairs have been founded—Natural History, 1807; Surgery and Midwifery, 1815; Chemistry, 1817; Botany, 1818; Materia Medica, 1831; Institutes of Medicine and Forensic Medicine, 1839; Civil Engineering, 1840; Conveyancing, English Language and Literature and Biblical Criticism, 1861. Previous to the Universities Act of 1858 the business of the University was transacted in three distinct courts, namely:—the Senate, comprising the Rector, Dean, and all the Professors; the Faculty, containing the Principal and the Professors whose chairs had been instituted in, or previous to, the last century; and the Comitia, comprehending the Rector, the Dean, the Principal, the Professors and the Matriculated Students of the University. But by the Universities Act of 1858, important changes were made in the constitution and Government of the University, by which the distinction between the Faculty and the Senate was abolished and two new bodies, the University Court and the University Council, were instituted. The Council consists of the enrolled graduates of the University, and has only deliberate functions. The Court, consisting of seven members, viz.—the Rector, the Principal, the Dean of Faculties, and four Assessors, nominated severally by the Chancellor, the Rector, the General Council of the University, and the Senatus Academicus, is empowered to review all decisions of the Senatus Academicus, to effect improvements in the internal arrangements, and to exercise other powers in the Government of the University. The Senatus, consisting of the Principal and twenty-five Professors, is entrusted with the ordinary superintendence and regulation of the teaching and discipline of the University, and the administration of its properties and revenues.

Connected with the new University and in a sense within its borders, is the Western Infirmary, opened in October, 1874. The cost was about £100,000.

Students of theology connected with the Free Church attend their own college—a handsome building in Lynedoch place, with a lofty campanile tower, whence a fine view of the city and surrounding districts can be obtained. In addition to the prelection of four professors, who carry them through a strictly theological course, lectures are likewise delivered on natural science in its theological bearings. The Anderson University, in George street, was founded by the late John Anderson, professor of natural philosophy in the University of Glasgow, on the 7th of May, 1795, and the following year was incorporated by the magistrates and council. This University is placed under the superintendence of 81 trustees, and the Lord Provost is one of the inspecting visitors. The endowment consisted of a philosophical apparatus, a library, and a museum; but the prosperity of the institution has been so great that the trustees have purchased the extensive pile of buildings formerly occupied by the Grammar School, which were opened in 1828, and the numerous classes now receive a more extended education, including philosophy, science, and the arts. The museum is opened to the public from eleven to three, on the payment of sixpence The High School, situate at the top of the hill behind the above University, is of an origin supposed to be coeval with the Cathedral, and within this Alma Mater several hundreds of youths acquire the elements of a liberal education. The Academy, in Elmbank row, is in some measure a rival institution to the above; both are very flourishing. They resemble the gymnasia of Germany, and afford an education intermediate between the ordinary school curriculum and the higher branches of academic learning. There are two normal schools, for training academies, one in connection with the Established and the other with the Free Church. An immense number of children are here taught, and there are about a hundred pupil teachers in each. The Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts, which occupies a site on the south side of Sauchiehall street, was opened on Feb. 3, 1880. The buildings, which are in the Greek and French Renaissance style of architecture, were designed by Mr. Burnet, and cost about £15,000. The city has no free library like that of Liverpool or Manchester, but the nucleus of such an institution is to be found in Stirling's Library, founded in 1791 by the late Walter Stirling, Esq., merchant in Glasgow, and enhanced by subsequent benefactions, till it now numbers over 50,000 volumes, which may be consulted in a commodious and comfortable reading room. The Glasgow Public Library is now amalgamated with Stirling's, and there was also added, some years ago, the valuable collection belonging to the late Dr. Scouler, who bequeathed it to the library at his death. The library contains many fine specimens of early printing and several manuscripts, also a complete set of the publications of the Patent Office. The Mitchell Library, to which the public are admitted free of charge, occupies temporary premises at 7 Ingram street, and was founded on a bequest which amounted to nearly £70,000, made by the late Stephen Mitchell Esq., merchants, of Glasgow, who died in April, 1874. The Library was opened 1st November, 1877, and now contains about 45,000 volumes. The College of Science and Arts, 88 Bath street, was founded in 1823. The Institution is aided by the Royal Incorporation of Hutcheson's Hospital, which sends representatives to its Council. Cowcaddens Mechanics' Institution, in Stewart street, contains about 3,000 volumes of carefully selected works. The Calton, Mile end, and Bridgeton Mechanics' Institution was instituted in 1833. The Glasgow Athenæum, in Ingram street, was instituted in 1847. The object of the Institution is to place within the reach of the public the fullest and most recent information on all subjects of general interest, whether commercial, literary, or scientific; to provide an agreeable place of resort in the intervals of business; to incite, especially among young men, a taste for intellectual and elevating pursuits, and to secure the means of its gratification, by affording the utmost facilities for systematic study in various branches of useful knowledge. The reading rooms are abundantly supplied with the earliest telegraphic intelligence, newspapers and periodicals of every kind, and the library contains upwards of 11,000 volumes. The Faculty of Physicians' and Surgeons' Hall is situated in St. Vincent street, within which the two incorporated bodies above named hold their meetings. The charter of their incorporation confers the right of granting diplomas, after examination, to students in medicine and surgery; and every person practising without such diploma in Glasgow, Renfrew, Dumbarton, Lanark, Kyle, Carrick, Ayr, and Cunningham, is liable to a fine of £3 8s. 6d. for each offence. The members of faculty enjoy the privilege of exemption from imposts and irksome duties. The freedom fine of admission into the faculty is £150, and licentiates within the city or suburbs pay £20, but those in the country £5. 5s; for the diploma of each student £5. 5s. is required. Every candidate for a diploma must produce evidence that he has studied three winter sessions, either at an university or under resident members of the college of physicians and surgeons of Edinburgh, London, or Dublin, or under the members of the faculty of physicians and surgeons in Glasgow, and that during that period he has attended public lectures on anatomy, surgery, chemistry, materia medica, the theory and practice of medicine, and midwifery; and that he has attended one year at some hospital, and studied pharmacy in an apothecary's or surgeon's shop for six months, without which he cannot be taken on trial. Candidates who have served an apprenticeship of three or more years must produce similar evidence. The faculty contribute to a fund, founded in 1792, for the support of their widows and children. The Faculty of Procurators' Hall, West George street, near to St. George's Church, is a large building in the Venetian style, designed as a library and hall for the procurators. It forms one of the finest architectural embellishments of the city. The educational institutions of Glasgow are very numerous, and are supported with creditable spirit; they are enumerated under the head of Academies and Schools, and in the list of public buildings. But the Ragged School which occupies a noble building in Rotten row, merits special notice from its peculiar character and beneficial results; the pupils are mostly the offspring of dishonest and profligate parents, and the children are fed as well as instructed. The Glasgow Institute of Architects was established for the advancement of the art and science of architecture, the consideration and discussion of all subjects and questions connected directly or indirectly with the profession of architects and the concentrated expression of opinion upon the same. There are about 50 members. In Virginia street, with a frontage thereto of 60 feet, the Glasgow Apothecaries' Hall has been erected by the Glasgow Apothecaries' Company. The style of architecture is the modern Italian, the frontage up to the first storey being faced with polished granite. The premises are suitably fitted up for carrying on a large business. The building erected for the New Club is situated in West George street, to which it has a frontage of 84 feet, and in which is the principal entrance. The premises are provided with every convenience which can conduce to the comfort of the members.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Royal Infirmary, situate near the Cathedral, exhibits an exterior of considerable beauty, while the arrangements of the interior are skilfully adapted to their benevolent object. The building has been much enlarged since its first erection, the latest addition being for the reception of accident patients. The lowest storey contains a laboratory, an apothecary's shop, hot and cold baths, and strong chambers for the temporary restraint of the insane. Beneath the dome is a spacious apartment which is appropriated to surgical operations. The Royal Lunatic Asylum, at Gartnavel, two miles west of the city, is a noble edifice, admirably constructed for the recovery and comfort of its unhappy inmates. No appliance is wanting that can minister to the attainment of these objects; a portion of the establishment is appropriated to pauper inmates. The Town's Hospital for paupers, in the Parliamentary road, is a building strikingly original in its design. The centre is octagonal, with four wings diverging from it. The wings contain rows of commodious chambers, and a long gallery for exercise. This structure was erected as an asylum for lunatics, but these have been removed to the Royal Lunatic Asylum at Gartnavel. The Poor House for the extensive Barony parish, at Barnhill, is a very capacious asylum for the children of poverty, and well adapted by its cleanliness, ventilation, and position to mitigate the ills of their condition. The Govan Parochial Board have also erected at Merryflats the finest asylum for the poor in Scotland. The Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Prospect Bank, Queen's Park, possesses every adaptation for its interesting object. The Asylum for the Blind in Castle street is capable of accommodating more than one hundred inmates, who are advantageously employed in the fabrication of various useful articles; and the invention of printing in relief, by enabling the blind to read manipular or tangible letters, has given a most interesting facility for their education. The Magdalen Asylum, at Maryhill, has accommodation for 130 inmates. There is also a Probationary Home at 17 Stirling road, where accommodation is provided for 50 inmates. The benefactors of the institution have the satisfaction of believing that many of its inmates have subsequently become permanently worthy of the protection that has been afforded them. The Mossbank Industrial Schools is an institution situated at Hogganfield, about two miles to the east of Glasgow. Its object is to lay hold of and educate neglected and destitute children, who, having no parents, or worse, whose parents, living themselves in vice and profligacy, leave their offspring to grow up in ignorance or become vagrants and criminals. It accommodates about 400 boys, who are taught trades, and about 200 girls, who are trained to domestic duties. The foundation stone was laid on the 26th August, 1868, with great ceremony, by the late Right Hon. the Earl of Dalhousie, K.T., Grand Master Mason of Scotland, assisted by the Right Hon. the Earl of Haddington and other officials of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Externally the building is of good red brick, enlivened by bands and ornamental work in white and black brick. The structure has a homely and comfortable aspect, and reminds one of the beautiful old English almshouses or hospitals. The Lock Hospital, in Rotten row, was formed in 1855, for the cure of unfortunate females. Hutcheson's Hospital, in Ingram street, was formed by the two brothers, George and Thomas Hutcheson, between the years 1639 and 1641. The former amassed a large fortune as a writer and notary, although his charges were so moderate that it is stated he would never charge more than sixteen pennies Scots for the writing of a bond, however large the amount; the latter brother was a preacher. From the original endowment and subsequent benefactions, the trustees are enabled to appropriate £3,000 per annum to pensions for aged men and women, and for the education and partial clothing of poor boys, together with £3 per annum to the latter. The present building, erected in 1803, is ornamented with an octagonal spire 156 feet high. The constitution of the hospital is much more liberal in consequence of an Act obtained in 1872. The Eye Infirmary, 76 Charlotte street, and 95 Greendyke street, is liberally supported, and has been successful in its operations. The House of Refuge and the Night Asylum in North Frederick street, are large and well managed institutions. Baillie's Institution was founded by the late Mr. George Baillie, writer, Glasgow, who divested himself in his lifetime of his whole fortune (£18,000) with its accumulations during twenty-one years from 11th November, 1863, to endow an institution for the self-culture of the operative classes in Glasgow, by means of free public libraries and reading rooms, and for the tuition and training of their children in unsectarian schools. The Dean, Council, and Clerk of the Faculty of Procurators in Glasgow, are perpetual preceptor, patrons, and directors of the institution, which was incorporated by Royal Charter, dated 18th March, 1867. In addition to the benevolent institutions already mentioned, there exist many others, which spread a lustre on the memories of departed citizens of Glasgow, as the following list of mortifications and bequests testify: Aird's Mortification, founded 7th September, 1723, by John Aird, provost of Glasgow. Thomas Thomson's Mortification, founded by Thomas Thomson, merchant in Glasgow, 18th September, 1720, £4 10s per annum, for distribution among the indigent poor, without distinction, in amounts varying from 1s. 8d. to 5s Wardrop's Bequest, dated 2nd September, 1824, made by James Wardrop, coppersmith in Glasgow. The funds are to be applied, in connection with the Sanders' Mortification, in educating and clothing an apprentice during the last year of his apprenticeship. Amount, £3 12s.

Natives of every county in Scotland have found a home in Glasgow, and there is scarcely one that does not give its name to a society composed of such persons united together for the two-fold objects of cherishing home memories and aiding persons from the same districts who may have fallen into distress. Although not eleemosynary in their character, this seems the place to advert to the cheap dining halls which have been established here, and have supplied a model for other towns throughout the kingdom. The distinguishing characteristic of the scheme principally was that every article sold—a cup of tea or coffee, a basin of broth, or whatever it was—should be charged a penny. There are a central depot where the cooking is done, and nearly thirty branch establishments where the viands are retailed. In any one of these a good, wholesome, and abundant dinner—a dinner of three courses and dessert can be had for fourpence halfpenny.

Missionary effort in Glasgow commands, as it deserves, an extensive and encouraging sympathy, and in connection with the Religious Tract and Book Society, which we gladly give a brief notice of, will, it is trusted, continue to prosper. The object of the Religious Tract and Book Society is to promote the diffusion of a healthy religious literature, especially among the humbler classes of the people, by the gratuitous distribution of tracts, and the offering by the system of colporteurage, of periodicals of a sound religious character for sale, at the houses of those who might not be attracted to them at the ordinary book shops. Other societies for religious objects are also very numerous, and are liberally supported. There are several Bible Societies and Sabbath School Societies, besides the Young Men's Christian Association, a numerous body, organised after the society in London, bearing the same name, and in connection with which a course of lectures is delivered every winter by eminent men. The Abstainers' Union is a body which also deserves mention. Organised with the view of abating the vice of drunkenness, the directors seek to wean men from the tavern and the tap-room by holding out to them other amusements. In winter they have concerts every Saturday evening in the City Hall, which is invariably thronged.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL SOCIETIES.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENT.

The Theatre Royal is in Cowcaddens. Externally there are no architectural features noteworthy, but the interior is sumptuously fitted up. The Grand Theatre is also located in Cowcaddens, and is very commodious and comfortable. The Gaiety Theatre is located in Sauchiehall street. The New Royalty Theatre, opened December, 1879, also in Sauchiehall street, is internally one of the handsomest in the kingdom; there is also a theatre called the Royal Princess's at the South Side. The Glasgow Athenæum, in Ingram street, was instituted in 1847. The object of the institution is to place within the reach of the public the fullest and most recent information on all subjects of general interest, whether commercial, literary, or scientific; to provide an agreeable place of resort in the intervals of business; to incite, especially among young men, a taste for intellectual and elevating pursuits, and to secure the means of its gratification by affording the utmost facilities for systematic study in various branches of useful knowledge. The reading rooms are abundantly supplied with the earliest telegraphic intelligence, newspapers, and periodicals of every kind, and the library contains upwards of 11,000 volumes. The Royal Botanic Gardens, Great Western road are highly deserving of inspection. The hothouses are extensive and well supplied with specimens of the floral and other vegetable productions of every tropical clime; they also contain a large Winter Garden. There are three music halls, viz., the Royal, in Dunlop street; the Scotia, in Stockwell street; and the Britannia, in Trongate.

NEIGHBOURING BURGHS.

GOVAN, at present the eighth burgh (Royal, Parliamentary, or otherwise) in Scotland in respect of population or rental, is beautifully situated on the south bank of the Clyde, about three miles west of Glasgow. Though outside the municipal boundaries of the city, the burgh is now almost one with it, there being a continuous line of houses connecting the two. It has little to interest the visitor beyond its extensive shipbuilding yards, which for the construction of iron vessels have earned a world-wild reputation. It has numerous public works, including two silk mills, the oldest of which, situated at the side of the river, and belonging to Morris Pollock and Son, was the first in which silks were spun in Scotland. There are nineteen places of worship within the burgh; six of these are connected with the Church of England, four United Presbyterian, four Free, one Episcopalian, one Baptist, one Congregationalist, one Evangelical Union, and one Roman Catholic. The parish church is picturesquely situated near the river, and is surmounted by a handsome spire, in imitation of that at Stratford-on-Avon. There are also a handsome academy and eight public schools, most of them recently erected. The burgh contains an area of 1,100 acres, and by the census returns of 1871 had a population of 19,899; which had increased in 1881 to 51,783.

The burgh of PARTICK, opposite GOVAN on the other side of the river, is also a continuation of Glasgow. It is irregularly built, but environed by agreeable scenery. There are several mills and factories and boat-building yards in the place. It contains three Established, two Free and three United Presbyterian churches, and several schools. The population has increased with extraordinary rapidity. In 1851, it was 6,670; in 1861, 14,861; in 1871, 23,904; and in 1881, 38,985.

MARYHILL, a burgh three miles north-west of Glasgow, is situated on the banks of the river Kelvin, which stream is crossed by the Forth and Clyde canal, by the medium of a noble aqueduct of lofty altitude; the village contains one Established, one Free, one United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are print works, iron foundries, bleach works, and glass works. The population in 1871 was 7,945, and in 1881, 18,336.

CROSSMYLOOF is a finely situated little hamlet, composed principally of plain houses ranged on both sides of the highway, about two miles south from Glasgow, commanding a wide spreading prospect of the surrounding country studded with towns, villages, and mansions, and bounded at the extreme distance by the misty Pentlands. The United Presbyterians have a place of worship here. An extensive baking establishment was erected in 1817 by the late Mr. Thomson, of Camphill, for the purpose of supplying the city of Glasgow with bread. There is also a small iron forge in the village.

KINNING PARK, situated to the south-west of Glasgow, was created a burgh 6th September, 1871. It has one Established, one Methodist, and one Congregational church. Assessable rental for 1878-9, £48,000. In 1871, it contained a population of 9,857, and in 1881, 13,001.

CROSSHILL burgh, created September, 1871, has a population of 3,700; assessable rental, about £22,000. It has one United Presbyterian church, one Established church, one Free church, and one Methodist church.

GOVANHILL burgh, created 4th July, 1877; estimated population, 8,000; assessible rental, £35,000.

HILLHEAD, situated close to the University, was created a burgh 14th May, 1869. The houses are almost without exception the dwellings of the wealthier middle class. Population in 1871, 3,718; assessable rental, £79,350.

POLLOKSHIELDS burgh, created 1876; estimated population, 2,000; assessable rental, £23,600.

SPRINGBURN, two and a half miles; PARKHEAD, two miles; TOLLCROSS, three miles; and SHETTLESTON, three and a half miles, are villages situated the above distances from Glasgow, and contain works of various kinds of manufactures, giving employment to a large number of inhabitants.
